This week we learned about pointers and what they are, but I was wondering what are some common uses of pointers in the software dev workforce?